

Allowing powerline RF transmissions would cause massive interference to radio amateurs especially during emergencies where signal strength is weak and conditions poor from portable transmitters in disaster areas.